It's always wisest to audition a product or component oneself, rather than slag on the character of another, or the intent.

Over the weekend I had the opportunity to listen to a very-well regarded preamplifier, one with a bevy of positive reviews (both for sonics and value). It had been upgraded with the V-caps (now with around 500 hours on them), and the presentation was simply stunning in comparison to the stock version (which I'd experienced in that system many times before). With an expression I've used for nearly 2 decades, hearing is believing.
